I am some what of an insomniac and watch some crazy shit late at night... Somehow I always get sucked into some reality show on MTV. And frankly it makes me worry about the generation following mine. The MTV generation is full of these kids that boss their parents around, do drugs, could care less about another human, and think they deserve everything to be handed to them.

So let me break it down...

Last night I watched a show "Teen Mom"

I don't understand who comes up with this shit... Really what person goes..."Let's show a young and undereducated person at the shittiest point in their life" People will love this show!

This leads me to some of my favorite Life Lessons...

1. Do not do things you don't understand? I can get pregnant from sex? No way... That's like crazy you know...
2. Read a damn book. These girls were so dumb it worries me... I mean really... This is the next generation in charge. Oh shit!
3. I'm sorry you screwed up you life... I really am. But please stop bitching and crying on TV to your mom about why she isn't keeping your kid so you can go party. You caused the problem... Buck up, take responsibility and deal with it! Don't be blaming your mom when you can't go out to hang every night.

But what can you do... That kid is gonna be as screwed up as you because they have you for a parent and apparently your parents didn't teach you anything anyway.....
